George E. Brown, Jr. (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding. Mr. Brown. The subcommittee will come to order. I think I ought to read my opening statement since we have not had a good materials hearing in some time. Today's hearing is the first of 2 days to consider national efforts in critical materials. In particular, we will be looking closely at the implementation of Title II of Public Law 98-373, the National Critical Materials Act of 1984. Today, we will look at broad materials policy questions. On the second day, we will focus on the important issue of critical materials in South Africa. Congressional concern for critical materials goes back many years. The oil embargo of the seventies made us all aware of import vulnerabilities with other critical materials such as cobalt, chromium, or manganese. More recently, we...
