Excerpt: .agents by the nature of the sensations we derive from them. Rainy weather is everywhere disagreeable; and yet it may be prejudicial in one country, and favourable, or, at least, indifferent in another. In the beginning of my medical career, I have often prevented my patients from going out if the weather threatened rain, and, yet, I have often remarked, and I know that several of my confreres have remarked also, that, generally speaking, grey and cloudy weather was much more suitable to our phthisical patients than a bright sun. Periods too long of fine weather, those that extend to five or six weeks for example, are infinitely less suitable to their health than equal periods of cloudy and rainy weather. Fine winter days, I may even say, although speaking of my own country, the splendid winter days that we have at Pau, and that excite the admiration of strangers, are only favourable when intermingled with cloudy days, or when succeeding a rainy period. During such sunny periods, the mornings and evenings are generally cold; but, from one to three, in the afternoon, we enjoy a warm spring temperature, from which invalids derive great benefit. Should these periods, however, extend, without interruption, beyond a month, the air becomes too dry, and the invalids do not continue to feel the same influence they had hitherto felt. This is not the case with long periods of rainy weather, which undoubtedly prevent certain of our winter visitors from...
