Excerpt: .like a tit s nest, and the eggs pure whie. I have found many of them personally. Along the rivers of Colombia, in the Andes, in the botanical gardens at Georgetown, near the jungle of British Guiana, and in a dozen other places. Invariably in my, experience the nesting pair have placed their home within a few inches of a wasp s nest. The wasps in question are a small social species of Polybia which are very numerous in the tropics. They construct a paper nest much like that of our common Polistes, ex cept that it much smaller, the paper of darker pulp and the bottom of the cells covered over. It is a case of symbiosis. The birds do not bother the wasps. The wasps respect the birds, doubtless to the mutual benefit of one another. SO much for the Tody. It never occurred to me that this habit might be frequent among birds of other climes, even here in the East perhaps. I thought nothing about it until recently, but now it has become a topic for special investigation and one of interest to me. Last spring, on the 29th of May, I was collecting in the woods near Stamford, Connecticut. I had found, for the first time in my life, four species of Warblers nesting within seventyfive feet of one another! A beautiful Redstart s nest and four richly colored eggs; then, almost at my very feet, the neat pocket...
