Excerpt from Child Study, 1909, Vol. 1: The Journal of the Child Study Society Beach was elected Chairman, and the two bodies arranged to work together in the matter of lectures, petitions to Parliament and investigation. Eventually an amalgamation took place, and the Childhood Society and the London Branch of the Association now form a constituent society under the title of The child-study Society, London. Doubtless the sum Of the valuable work done by each Of these societies in the past, will be surpassed by their combined efforts in the future. The term z mogm ta Of the child is under these agencies being rapidly explored. It is now recognised that the child differs from the adult, not only in degree but in kind. Its ways are not our ways nor its thoughts our thoughts. The child is nearer to the future of the race than the man, and it has been touchingly and truly remarked by Miss Mason, that the child is as a prince committed to the fostering care of peasants. The Calvinistic idea that education must of necessity be painful has at last been discarded. Roger Ascham long ago remarked that young children were sooner allured by love than driven by beating to attain good learning. It is doubtful if a great man ever accomplished his life work without having reached a play interest in it. Thanks to the advance Of child-study, organised games are now recognised in the Code as a means Of education. How different is this from the ascetic and unholy View that Play of every sort should be forbidden, its vanity and folly should be explained to the child, with warnings how it turns the mind...
