Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 70: April 23, 1908 His recovery, however, was only temporary, and on Friday, April 9th, he was compelled to return to bed. The doctor then decided that an operation was absolutely necessary. He called to his assistance a skilled surgeon. The operation was performed the following afternoon. The appendix was found to be in good condition, but a large abscess was discovered in the intestines, from which two cup fulls of matter was extracted. Elder Tripp rallied after the operation, but again relapsed. He seemed to realize that his mission on earth was drawing to a close, and so informed his companion, Elder Robinson. Sunday afternoon he lost consciousness, and remained in that condition till the time of his demise. The doctor had noticed signs of spinal meningitis Sunday morning, and these became more apparent the following day. Monday morning the physician said the end was in sight. But the elders and saints continued in prayer and fasting and earnest intercession in behalf of their afflicted brother. A slight change for the better was observed Monday afternoon, which gave all interested renewed hope. But at 8 p.m. Of the same day the deceased began to sink again and finally succumbed at the hour before mentioned. All that loving hands could do was done willingly. From the time he took to his bed till the moment when his immortal Spirit returned to its Creator, Elder Tripp was watched over with the greatest solicitude. His death is keenly felt by the elders and saints among whom he labored. President Sylvester Q. Cannon, of the Netherlands-Belgium mission, began to make preparations for the transportation of...
