Okay, there s nothing spectacular about swimming ten days in a row unless it s down the Hudson River from Albany to the Battery and the record is held by a DOG. Along the way, swimmer Skip Storch confronts confounding tides, adverse weather, alcoholic support crews, invasive fauna, mechanical failures, financial woes, physical exhaustion but sees a successful swim strategy emerge. Never mind that the physical therapist is a lesbian and every guy on the swim wants to fix her, the drunken captain moons her when he s not singing songs from the sixties on the bow of his boat, and the swim director completely screws up the first swim. It s a play. A long play; one might even say an epic play for it was an epic swim. It was a beautiful swim that saw a daily swims at sunrise and sunset against a backdrop of the beautiful Hudson River valley where the legions of boaters and their communities applauded his efforts....
