Most scholars of antiquity agree that there was an individual named Jesus. What also becomes apparent is that much of the philosophy, dogma and supernatural teachings of Christianity can be traced to much earlier religions and that the Jews of the time borrowed or adopted these pre-Christian cultural and religious myths as their own. The Jews actually worshiped several pagan gods in their history. Many scholars that specialize in the hermeneutics of the New Testament agree that due to numerous flawed interpretations of The New Testament, that was written in Koinai Greek and Aramaic were mistranslated. As a result Jesus was most likely a stone mason, born in a cave whose likeness represented that as shown of the cover. Christianity is the religion about Jesus rather than the religion of Jesus. There remains a strong consensus in historical-critical biblical scholarship that a historical Jesus did live in that area and in that time period. However, scholars differ on the historicity of specific episodes described in the Biblical accounts of Jesus, and the only two events subject to almost universal agreement are that Jesus was baptized by John the Baptist and was crucified by the order of the Roman Prefect Pontius Pilate. Some scholars have made the case that there are a number of plausible Jesus that could have existed, that there can be no certainty as to which Jesus was the historical Jesus. Christ's given name, commonly Romanized as Yeshua, was quite common in first-century Galilee. (Jesus comes from the transliteration of Yeshua into Greek and then English.) Archaeologists have unearthed the tombs of 71 Yeshuas from the period of Jesus death. Many of the allegories, events and proclaimed miracles...
