

The Burda (Dodo Press)

By El-Busiri

Dodo Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 48 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 5.9in. x 0.3in. Busiri (Abu Abdallah Muhammad Ibn Said Ul-Busiri) (1211-1294) was an Egyptian poet who wrote under the patronage of Ibn Hinna, the vizier. His poems seem to have been wholly on religious subjects. The most famous of these is the so called The Burda (Poem of the Mantle). It is entirely in praise of the prophet Muhammad, who cured the poet of paralysis by appearing to him in a dream and wrapping him in a mantle. The poem has had a unique history. Even in the poet's lifetime it was regarded as sacred. Up to the present time its verses are used as amulets; it is employed in the lamentations for the dead; it has been frequently edited and made the basis for other poems, and new poems have been made by interpolating four or six lines after each line of the original. It has been published with English translation by Faizullahbai (Bombay, 1893), with French translation by R. Basset (Paris, 1894), with German translation by C. A. Ralfs (Vienna, 1860), and in other languages elsewhere. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La...
