Excerpt from The War and the Jew: A Birds Eye View of the Worlds Situation and the Jew Place in It The author of the following pages may be truly described as an Hebrew of the Hebrews. He was born in Jerusalem, the son of a Jewish Rabbi, who was so intense a nationalist that he would use no language but Hebrew. Born of such parentage, he maintained, as a Christian, the full fervour of Jewish patriotism. That love of his own people, which flamed in the heart of the Apostle Paul, has inspired the author's whole Christian life and ministry, and glows with the utmost ardor in these pages.
