CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 496 pages. Dimensions: 11.0in. x 8.5in. x 1.1in. The National Report on Biochemical Indicators of Diet and Nutrition in the U. S. Population is a series of publications that provide ongoing assessment of the U. S. populations nutritional status by measuring blood or urine concentrations of diet-and-nutrition biochemical indicators. The Centers for Disease Control and Preventions (CDC) Division of Laboratory Sciences at the National Center for Environmental Health (NCEHDLS) conducted the laboratory analyses for 58 biochemical indicators presented in this 2012 report, which is the second in this series. CDC measured these indicators in specimens from a representative sample of the U. S. population during all or part of the four-year period from 2003 through 2006. Where available, data are also presented on changes of biochemical indicator concentrations over time since 1999. Similarly, data are also presented on the prevalence of low or high biochemical indicator concentrations during 2003-2006, and on changes in the prevalence over time since 1999. The first report of this series was published in July 2008 and contains information on 27 biochemical indicators from all or part of the four-year period from 1999 through 2002. CDCs National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES), conducted by the National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS), collected the specimens for this report. NHANES is a series of surveys designed to collect data on the health and nutritional status of the U. S. population. This report covers biochemical measurementsone important facet in the assessment of the U. S. populations nutritional status. Other nutrition-related aspects from NHANES, such as dietary intake, supplement usage, hematologic measurements, and anthropometric body measurements are not covered. In this report, a biochemical indicator means a nutrient (e. g. , vitamin, fatty acid, trace element), a...
