Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Southern Sketches The dissembling smiles of an accomplished coquette, is all I have for requital for my almost sacred worship. Speak not so, Elbert Grant, said the pale and agitated Cecil; but not deigning a reply, and murmuring a hasty farewell, Elbert Grant departed. And with a heavy heart did he pace the floor of his apartment, a small office in A., plainly but neatly furnished, containing a few of the luxuries of a student of medicine, unlike the sumptuous apartments of Walter Earnest. Walter E. and Elbert Grant had been friends and associates from childhood; but now that they both strove to gain the same prize - rivals in love - there was a growing enmity existing between them that it seemed nought could eradicate. Chapter II. After Elbert Grant departed, Cecil burst into a flood of tears, and with the most agonizing feelings, prepared to dress herself for an evening party to which W. Earnest had promised to accompany her. After having gone through with all the graces of her toilet, and her maid having pronounced her dress complete, she quietly surveyed herself in an opposite mirror, and with a haughty air, she asked of her maid: Do you not think me a prize worthy to be gained by any suitor? Of course, her maid answered the question satisfactorily, and after having flattered her with all the honeyed words she knew was requisite to satisfy her mistress s pride, she descended the stairs with her mistress, and going before her to open the parlor door, they were suddenly confronted by W. Earnest, who, after passing the usual compliments upon the costume of his...
