Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Bureau of Standards Journal of Research, Vol. 5: November, 1930 A systematic investigation of the thermal conductivities of specimens composed of fibrous materials has been made. The experiments were designed to Show the effects of such factors as density of packing, arrangement of fibers, kind and size of fibers, moisture content, air convection, and radiation, on the resultant conductivity of the specimens. Data on various mixtures of fibers were obtained, and it was found that in most cases the conductivity of the mixture lies between those of the constituents, taking the conductivity of each constituent which corresponds to a density equal to the density of the mixture. It was found that for a given fibrous material and a. Given density, the conductivity may vary by several hundred per cent, depending entirely on the arrangement of the fibers. The maximum conductivity is obtained when the fibers are parallel to and the minimum conductivity when the fibers are perpendicular to the direction of heat flow. There is included a discussion of the part which contact resistance between the fibers may play in the over-all heat transfer. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at This book is a reproduction of an important historical work. Forgotten Books uses state-of-the-art technology to digitally reconstruct the work, preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy.
